President's Message

One legitimate way to designate the twentieth century is as the age of the automobile. By means of this advance in transportation, Americans left their homes, their neighborhoods, their regions far more often than their ancestors did, with the (mostly happy) result that the horizons of their world, in the physical and intellectual sense, were broadened. It may be too early to forecast the monikers the twenty-first century will be given, but at this point at least one may be hazarded. If the twentieth century was the age of the automobile, the twenty-first may well be the age of the mobile electronic device, in which our horizons are no longer bound by the constraints of physical travel but by the vagaries of electronic access. With our phones, computers, and e-readers, we can, if we choose, range more widely than our ancestors did without ever leaving our homes; we can also carry enormous stores of information around in our pockets. The ascendancy of mobile devices in the world at large is reflected in the library, where usage on both sides of the desk increases daily.

Where will this lead us? No one can be quite certain. What does seem to be certain is that our patrons' ability to access information at home, on the subway, in the classroom is compelling us to re-conceptualize the nature of some of the library's stalwart functions: reference work, public services, continuing resources, and even the loaning of materials, which today might be done through e-readers. All this has caused some to question the very existence of the library as a place in itself, as if it would become a cumbersome hanger-on in a new virtual reality. We as librarians must emphasize the value of our work in order to ensure that we work with the changes wrought by technological advances, and are not simply swept along by them.

These brief remarks are occasioned by the topics for the Reference Interest Group and for the afternoon session of our upcoming Winter meeting, both of which concern technological applications in the library. I am grateful to Laura Saloiye, Executive Committee secretary, and Kim Demyan of Moravian for their efforts. Dan LaValla has graciously allowed us to use Biblical Theological Seminary as our meeting-place. Please join us there on February 1st for what promises to be a thought-provoking day.

James Humble

Institutional News

Baptist Bible College & Seminary

Murphy Memorial Library is pleased to announce the hiring of Jeremy McGinniss as Associate Librarian for User Services. Jeremy has recently served as the Library Director at Davis College in Johnson City, New York. He will be overseeing information literacy instruction, ILL services, and library marketing among other responsibilities. He will begin on January 9, 2012. Jeremy is joining his father, mother, and sister in employment at BBC&S.

Lutheran Theological Seminary- Philadelphia

On September 6, 2011, the seminary community and its friends assembled to celebrate the 300th Anniversary of the birth of Henry Melchior Muhlenberg, the patriarch of the Lutheran Church in America. The day-long celebration included lectures, workshops, and a banquet. The keynote speaker was the renowned church historian, Dr. Martin Marty. The highlight of the evening banquet was a visit from Philadelphia Mayor, Michael Nutter who brought greetings and an apology. In 1917, the Lutheran church offered the city of Philadelphia a statute of Henry Melchior Muhlenberg. It was cast by the sculptor, J. Otto Schweitzer who had created the statute of Henry's famous son Peter that is outside the Philadelphia Museum of Art. The city refused the statute of Henry because it was "too denominational." In reality it was "too German" for Philadelphia in 1917. Although 'pardoned,' the statute will remain on campus, greeting visitors who enter the seminary at the Germantown Avenue entrance.

Philadelphia Biblical University

Masland Library implemented Innovative Interfaces' Discovery Service, Encore, in Fall 2011.

Dr. Samuel Hsu, Philadelphia Biblical University's Distinguished Professor of Music and Chair of Keyboard studies, died Friday, December 2, 2011 from injuries sustained when he was hit by a car in Center City Philadelphia. A service and concert at PBU will be planned for early in the New Year. More information will be posted on the PBU website when it is available.

St. Charles Borromeo Seminary

St. Charles Borromeo Seminary has, through the placement of a new Archbishop in the Philadelphia Archdiocese, a new Head of our Board of Trustees, Archbishop Charles Chaput. In addition, the library is near to finishing the cataloging of a large historical pamphlet collection, from the early to mid-1900s. In addition, the library has joined the Catholic Resource Reference Alliance, (CRRRA) a group of Catholic libraries and archives working together to create one portal through which all Catholic historical material will be available.
